California Coastal Cleanup Day
Presented by the California Coastal Commission and Whole Foods Market

UPDATED: Results with 90% of cleanup sites reporting

California Cleans Up Nice at the 24TH Annual California Coastal Cleanup Day

(San Francisco) Tens of thousands of Californians scoured our beaches, shorelines, and inland locations to pick up trash and debris this morning, covering over 750 sites and gathering hundreds of tons of trash. These volunteers took part in the California Coastal Commission's 24TH Annual California Coastal Cleanup Day presented by Whole Foods Market, part of the International Coastal Cleanup organized by The Ocean Conservancy. Beach, inland waterway, and community cleanups took place up and down the California coast, from Mexico to the Oregon border, around San Francisco Bay, and at sites as far inland as Lake Tahoe and the Salton Sea.

With 90% of the cleanup sites reporting,

the statewide count stands at 63,482 volunteers,
which sets a new record for volunteer turnout,
topping last year's total of 61,112.

Those volunteers picked up 814,154 pounds of trash and an additional 132,277 pounds of recyclable materials, for a total of 946,431 pounds.

The Coastal Commission expects to exceed 1,000,000 pounds of debris for the first time in history when all the totals are in.

Past Coastal Cleanup Day data tell us that most (between 60-80 percent) of the debris on our beaches and shorelines comes from inland sources, traveling through storm drains or creeks out to the beaches and ocean. Rain—or even something as simple as hosing down a sidewalk—can wash cigarette butts, bits of styrofoam, pesticides, and oil into the storm drains and out to the ocean. The California Coastal Commission is asking all Californians to take responsibility for making sure trash goes where it belongs—securely in a trashcan, recycling bin, or a hazardous waste dump when appropriate.

As occurs every year, some unusual items were found throughout California. The Winners of the 2008 Most Unusual Item contest were:

- Coastal California: A volunteer in San Luis Obispo found a 52-pound bag of dog hair.
- Inland California: A volunteer in San Joaquin County found a family of crawdads living in a purse.

The Coastal Commission will award $50 gift certificates to each volunteer who found the unusual items.

For the past five years, California Coastal Cleanup Day has shown steady growth in both volunteer and debris totals, and the initial results from 2008 look to continue this trend. "Our efforts this year were helped tremendously by our partnership with Whole Foods Market and their summer-long effort to help publicize the Cleanup," said Eben Schwartz, Coastal Cleanup Day Director for the California Coastal Commission. "Along with our sponsors, the Cleanup is really run by the hundreds of volunteers, non-profit groups, and local government agencies that make up the heart and soul of the effort. Our cooperation this year is unprecedented, and we're seeing the results in the statewide turnout."

Results from last year: In 2007, 61,112 volunteers picked up over 903,000 pounds of trash and recyclables statewide on Coastal Cleanup Day, the largest cleanup in the event's history. 40 percent of all debris items picked up were cigarette butts - volunteers picked up over 345,000 of them in only three hours last year. This was the 23RD straight year in which cigarette butts were the most numerous debris item picked up.

Those who were unable to make it to the beach for Coastal Cleanup Day can still participate in COASTWEEKS, a three-week celebration of our coastal resources that takes place across the United States. The Coastal Commission has a calendar of COASTWEEKS events on its website. Volunteers are encouraged to contact the California Coastal Commission for more information about COASTWEEKS. To get involved with COASTWEEKS, or to find out how you can become a Coastal Steward throughout the year, please contact the Commission at (800) COAST-4U or visit our Web site at www.coast4u.org.
